Atlantis Marina

---

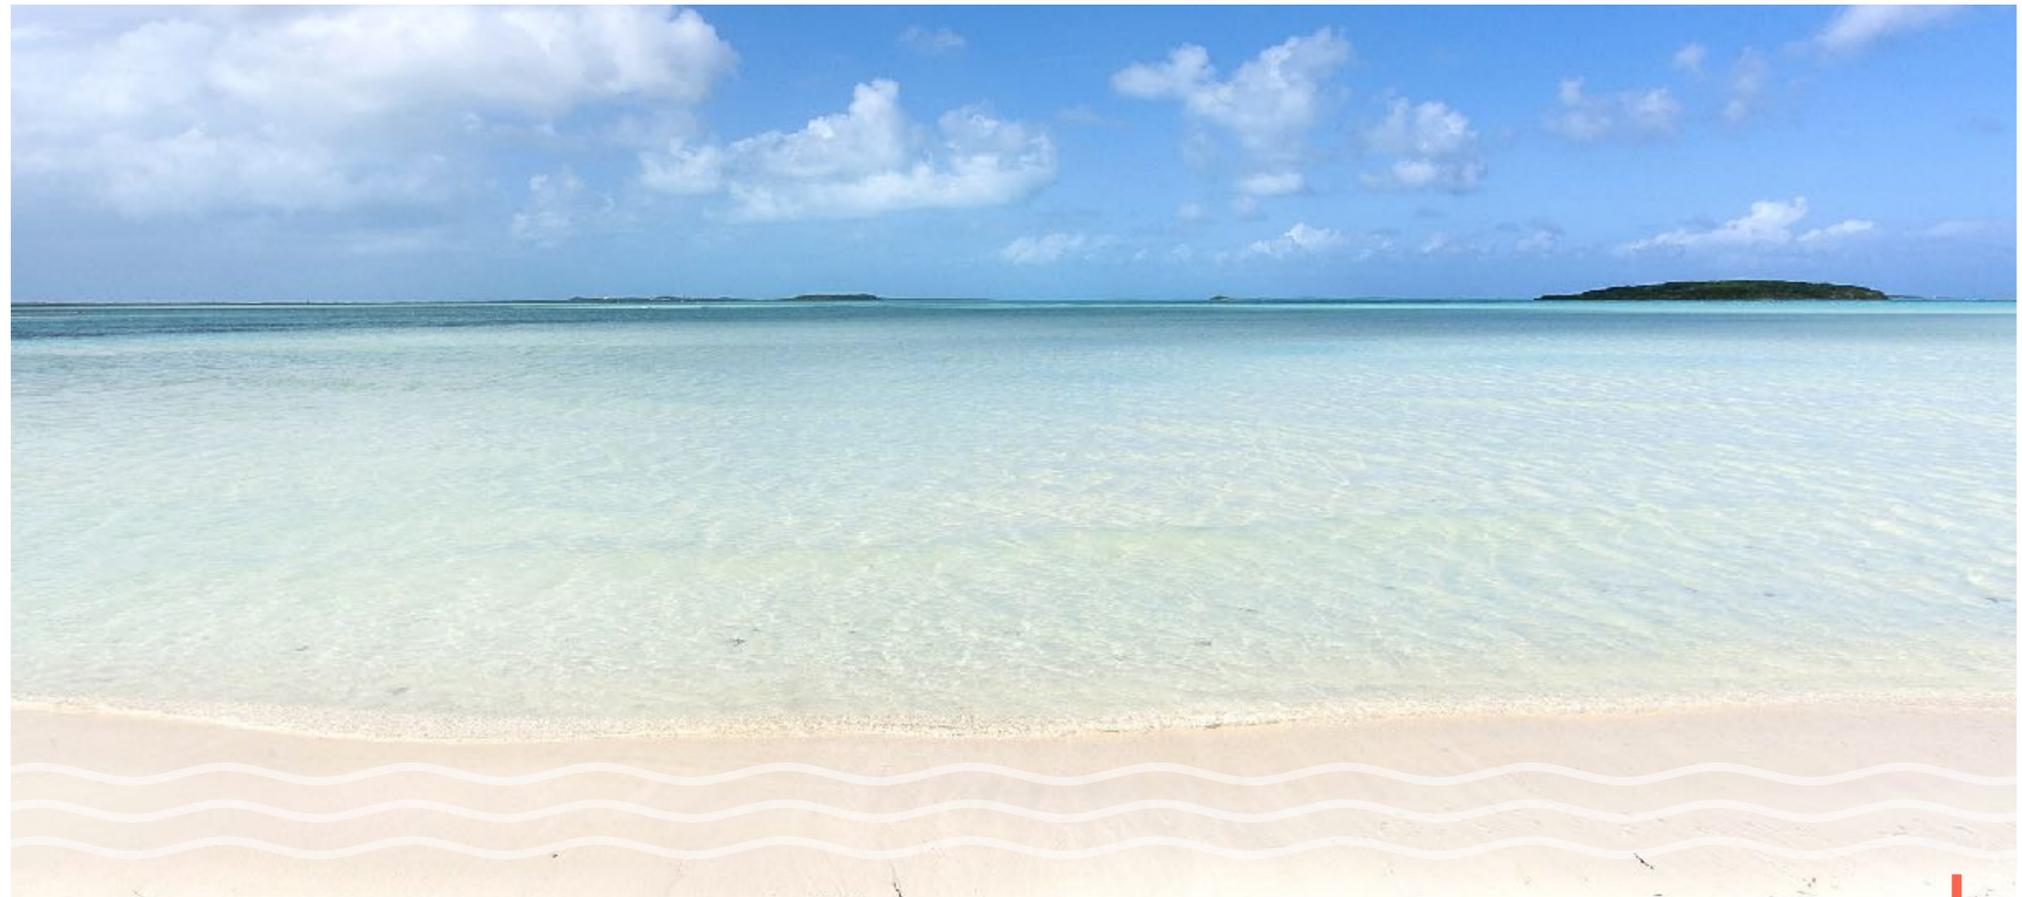

If you like lively music and upbeat atmosphere, thrilling rides and tranquil Lazy River, Aquaventure at Atlantis Paradise is the place to go. You'll find fun things to do for all age groups and bravery levels in this 141-acre water park. The walk under the Predator Tunnel is eerily creepy; adrenaline-laden Leap of Faith in the Mayan Temple is not for the timid! On a different note, wave pools and ponds with fish and turtles are just right if you are in the mood for something idyllic and relaxing.

In Atlantis Resort you'll also find the spectacular Atlantis Casino, breathtaking beaches, authentic Bahamian experiences, an oceanside golf course, celebrity chef diving and world-class nightlife.

Allan's Cay

Allan's Cay, in the north of Exuma archipelago, is home to a rare species of Bahamian rock iguana. Iguanas used to be hunted for food and captured for sale in the pet trade, which at one point put the species on the brink of extinction. Currently, with a population of one thousand animals, they are protected by law. When iguanas see a yacht approaching the island, they leave the bushes waiting for the handouts of fruits, veggies and bread that visitors bring.

Shroud Cay

Shroud Cay, a mega-yachts favourite stopover, is an uninhabited chain of islands and rocks encircling a shallow mangrove salt lake, locally known as salina. There are streams that you can ride down to the open water. The salina is home to lobsters, sea turtles, various fish and sea birds.

Shroud Cay is a part of Exuma Cays Land and Sea Park. It lies to the south of Norman's Cay, a couple of miles away; Warderick Wells Cay is further off in the south-eastern direction.

Staniel Cay

With heavenly beaches, some of the bluest waters in the world, and vibrant aquatic life, Staniel Cay is an island you wouldn't want to miss during your luxury yacht adventure.

One of Staniel Cay's drawcards is the Thunderball grotto, a spectacular underwater cave in the area where the eponymous 1965 James Bond movie was filmed. The best time to snorkel in the grotto is when the tide is low.

Big Majors, with their world-famous swimming pigs, is minutes away from Staniel Cay. The pigs have no natural enemies in this blessed location, Big Majors are uninhabited, so the pigs grew to love swimming and frolicking in the sea next to island's guests who bring them treats.

Warderick Wells

Warderick Wells Cay is a protected area in the centre of the Exuma Cays Land and Sea Park. Here you'll find several natural pathways that make the cay ideal for hiking. With any luck, you'll see hutias, a rare species of rodents, reminiscent of oversized guinea pigs; they grow to be as big as a cat. On the east coast of the cay there are ruins dating back to 1789.

Norman's Cay

Despite its marvellous beaches, top world snorkelling and diving spots and scenic beauty, Norman's Cay has a somewhat unsavoury reputation. It dates back to the late 1970-ies – early 1980-ies, when Carlos Lehder, a drug lord of German-Columbian origin, used the cay as a base for his drug smuggling operations and wild parties.

Today this small – a few hundred acres – island is an idyllic off-the-beaten-track yachting, wreck and lobster diving destination, quiet and secluded.

Rose Island

A smallish Rose Island is to the east of Paradise Island, about three miles away. Once a pineapple plantation, now it is a protected area with no roads or formal residential infrastructure. You'll be impressed with crystal clear water, breathtaking beauty of the nature, powder white sand, coconut trees swaying in the wind and lush vegetation.

The island has a thin sandy peninsula which juts out 7 miles east.

Return to Albany Marina
